PELHAM WOMEN CAST FIFTY VOTES,

Cross Marks So Poorly Made LAST DAYS OF FIGHT. That Nobody Could Tell What They Meant.

WHY BALLOT WAS LOST.

"Such a Crowd" at the Polls Get Out of Carriage.

By Ethel Lloyd Patterson. Ten of the votes were thrown out be- teen years old, but she has friends who cause the ballots were incorrectly marked, but aside from that every one had a perfectly lovely time.

While all Manhattan, from the Battery to the Bronx, has been a seething | conducted by a newspaper has attracted suffrage argument, the fair citizens of the attention this one has on account Pelham have been metaphorically "saying nothing but sawing wood." Can they vote? Well, I should say so, and educated for stage careers by Mr. Frohnot any of your fake straw ballots, placed before the skirted politicians were, first: Whether a new Town Hall, to cost $25,000, was to be built, and second, whether the additional purchase of a $5,000 piece of property was necessary.

"I voted in this township when no other woman would take the trouble to do it," proclaimed Mrs. G. S. Karback, who seemed to be the leading spirit of the polls. "Not that shirking responsibility is necessarily a feminine trait," she added. "The men are the same way. They want to see a measure or a resolution passed, but they won't take the trouble to go down to the polls and vote for it. Then, when things go differently from the way they wished. they commence to complain about it.

Not New Experience.

"It is nothing new, though, for the women of Pelham to vote," Mrs. Karahead of New York, for we have been voting for that length of time. You see all property owners here, whether men or women, are permitted votes upon subjects that concern their taxation. Even the joint property ownership of Of course, a lot of the Pelham women are not interested enough in these things to bother to come down to the polls, but I have been preaching to them lately. I ask them what they they had to look after their own property alone. A lot more of them turned out this time than ever before. There were about one hundred and fifty voters, fifty of whom were women, I should they had to look after their own property alone. A lot more of them turned accomplished other than by bridge. Mrs. Earle McClish, of No. 123 Maryland street, Buffalo, made an effort to cross, but slipped into a pool of water and was compelled to abandon the trip. fifty of whom were women, I should were printed above, and spaces opposite the words 'Yes' and 'No' were left, so that a cross might be printed after either one of them.

"No, you would not think that a mistake was possible," Mrs. Karback agreed, "but nevertheless ten women did disqualify their votes. They printed the crosses so poorly that nobody could tell what they had attempted to signify. Then some of them got the crosses in the wrong place, or else wrote comments on their ballots."

Why She Didn't Vote.

"I did not vote," Mrs. F. Hurttig, another Pelham matron, admitted, "but I went all the way down to the fire-house on Fifth avenue, where the polls were. "I had not intended to go, but wher it was almost luncheon time somebody drove up for me and told me that my vote was needed for something or other. I did not understand it at all, but they said that all I need do was just drive down to the fire-house and draw a cross opposite the word 'Yes' on the house that I thought I would wait a little while before I went in. The crowd any one, but I just quietly slipped home knew whether I voted or not."
